Message from the Grand Basileus

My Brothers,

I am blessed, proud, and pleased that you selected me to lead our beloved Fraternity at this unique moment in time. The challenges have been significant, yet the work has been rewarding. We have focused our stewardship on restoring the esprit’ de corps’, the Royal Purple and Old Gold thread that bonds the brotherhood.

Each day we work to continue earning the brotherhood’s confidence in our leadership team. During my first term, I have led the team to every District in Omega, to increase transparency and avail ourselves to the brothers’ concerns. I chose face to face contact rather than the worldwide web. I believe with Friendship and Fraternity, Omega men can decide the question in the best interest of our beloved organization.

Together, we put forth a successful Centennial Celebration in less than 10 months; we were immediately faced with the first Grand Conclave of Omega’s second century, which was previously awarded; and the grand celebration on November 17, 2011 at Howard University. All of these represented Omega in ways that respected our brand.

We have used technology to improve conference registration and initiate electronic conclave reports for posting two weeks before the meeting, thus bringing significant savings to our bottom line. Additional improvements will follow.

God has given us the glorious privilege of witnessing the sunset of our first century and dawn of our second. With this blessing, let us all do well our parts. Together we can be the difference that we seek.

Fraternally,

Andrew A. Ray

Brothers,

Please join me in extending sincere appreciation to Brother Milbert O. Brown, Jr., Assistant Editor to The Oracle, for organizing this edition of The Oracle. When Omega called on Brother Brown to take on this enormous task of producing The Oracle, he did not hesitate to step up.

While I was deployed to the Middle East in support of Operation New Dawn 2011-2012, my work behind the scenes for Omega continued for The Oracle. Now that I am back in the United States, our goal is to get back to a regular schedule for The Oracle. Our District Directors of Public Relations, Chapter Reporters, committee chairmen, and brothers in general are our greatest assets as we record the news and history of Omega. Thank you for your continued patience.

Comments may be sent to editortotheoracle@oppf.org at your convenience.

From the Assistant Editor to the Oracle

Several years ago, I began my journey as a member of the Fourth Estate--journalism. My humble voyage started when as a sly 2nd grader, my teacher selected me as the class reporter. Quickly, I rushed home and told my parents that I wanted to become a reporter. Later, I entered college as a freshman journalism student in the mid-1970s.

My first college job was working as a layout & design assistant on the university newspaper in the basement. After a while, I asked about writing stories for the paper, but the writing jobs that paid were reserved for the upperclassmen. After writing a few free stories, I discovered if I became a photographer, I would be paid and could exit my nighty basement location. So, it was during my early years at Ball State University where I was trained to perform several duties in the journalism profession. Also, that early training would be important as I worked on our beloved Oracle. I had the task of editing over 500 articles and 3,500 pictures for this Oracle issue.

As an undergraduate member of Omega Psi Phi's Upsilon Beta chapter, I first served the Fraternity as the chapter's historian. After a successful career as an editor, photojournalist and writer for several major newspapers and public affairs agencies, I embarked on my second career as a college journalism professor and a multi-media consultant.

It has been a great honor serving as the Assistant Editor to the Oracle, coordinating information with Omega editors, editing national & international stories. Working on this issue of the Oracle reminded me of the nights when I worked on the university newspaper on the ground floor--in the basement.

Thousands of Omega men, clad in Royal Purple and Old Gold, traveled to Washington D. C. in July 2011 to celebrate the founding of the nation’s first Black Greek letter fraternal organization at a historically black college. Omega Psi Phi Fraternity was founded November 17, 1911 on the campus of Howard University.

“The Centennial was a glorious moment in time, when Omega Men from their respective stations in life met on the plane of friendship and fraternity…and parted on the square of Manhood, Scholarship, Perseverance and Uplift.”

Brother O’Neal, an All-Star player recently retired from the National Basketball Association. He was one of the top 100 NBA players in the league’s history and is a future Hall of Famer.
The Centennial Conclave continued to have a profound impact on members when they returned home. More than 20,000 Omega men attended the five-day gathering held at the Walter Washington Convention Center. Fraternity leaders said the conclave focused on community service, youth mentoring and philanthropic efforts.

The highlight of the Conclave included a surprise meeting with President Barack H. Obama. Dr. Andrew A. Ray said President Obama opened the dialogue by mentioning that he was familiar with Omega's work in support of his Fatherhood Initiative. That effort, led by Brothers Thabiti Boone and Robert Fairchild, has brought a strong focus on the role fathers play in the lives of their children and in the community.

The Fraternity is playing an integral role in President Obama's Fatherhood and Mentoring Initiative. Chapters left Washington, D.C. energized and empowered to conduct programs and events that promote the role patriarchs and men have in the life of their children.

"Chapters have pledged to work to change government policies in their communities, because they believe government agencies should be challenged to foster better communications and create working relationships that address policies affecting fathers involvement in the lives of children," Dr. Ray said.

Another highlight of the Centennial Celebration, was the memorial service and wreath-laying ceremony that took place at Arlington National Cemetery, honoring Brother Colonel Charles Young, a recipient of the NAACP Spingarn Medal and one of the first Black men to graduate from West Point. During the ceremony, Brother Colonel Angelo Riddick described Colonel Young as a "true warrior, who exemplified the Four Cardinal principles of Manhood, Scholarship, Perseverance and Uplift."

A salute to Omega men who are serving or who have served in the military capped that day’s activities. Omega’s ranks include more than 20 military generals and a host of officers and enlisted Soldiers.

During the Undergraduate Luncheon, U.S. Secretary of Education Arne Duncan, encouraged the Fraternity to help build the pipeline of the next generation of high-quality teachers in the nation's classrooms. In September 2010, the agency launched the TEACH campaign, which encourages more young adults, especially minorities and males, to pursue careers in education.

Former Second Vice Grand Basilei were recognized for their service to the Fraternity. Among them was the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson Sr., who has been an Omega member for more than 50 years. Brother Jackson also was the keynote speaker during the closing night Founders' banquet. During the event, Jackson challenged members to live up to the vision and mission laid out by the Founders and to pursue social justice and economic equality. At the banquet the descendants of three of the Fraternity's four Founders were recognized.

Dozens of Omega men were recognized for their professional and civic work. They included entertainer Bill Cosby; NBA legend Michael Jordan; comedian/radio personality Rickey Smiley; U.S. Rep. James Clyburn; former Virginia Governor
Douglas Wilder; NASA Administrator Charles Bolden; former U.S. Surgeon General Dr. David Satcher; Ernest Green of the Little Rock Nine, Black Enterprises publisher Earl Graves; Essence magazine founder Ed Lewis; and Vernon Jordan, former leader of the National Urban League.

Other members who work in the fields of business, civic, politics, and medical fields also received recognition. A number of public forums, black-tie dinners, receptions, dances and community service efforts were packed into the week-long celebration. A number of events, parties, stepshows and memorials occupied members’ schedules. The 55-voice Omega Chorale, led by Brother Henry Porter, performed at various Centennial events.

The Fraternity paid homage to its Howard University roots by donating nearly $500,000 to the school. Other events centered around Omega’s emphasis on community service, social action programs and philanthropy. Members also took part in a march to the home of Carter G. Woodson, a member of the Fraternity. The National Parks Service is restoring Woodson’s former residence.

Less than 50 years following the end of slavery, Omega Psi Phi was founded. Dr. Carter G. Woodson was one of the nation’s leading historian during the early years of the Fraternity. Inside the third-floor biology office, three Howard University students and their faculty advisor sought to address the racial hostilities of the day.

Inside the convention center, the Fraternity’s History and Artifacts Committee featured archival displays from each district. Members, both young and old, were able to view Omega’s historic photographs and items.
Brother Louis Russell, (center) of Lambda Epsilon Chapter, was a new generation of younger Omega men who attended the historical Centennial Conclave. He was joined by several of his chapter brothers both young and old, as he listened to speakers after the bricklaying ceremony at Howard University. Oracle staff photograph.

Oscar J. Cooper, Frank Coleman, Edgar A. Love and their advisor, Dr. Ernest E. Just were led to create our Fraternity based on high ideals, as well as uplifting the African American community. “Part of the work during the Centennial was that the organization can expand its philanthropic activities,” said Dr. Andrew A. Ray, the Fraternity’s 39th Grand Basileus.

Dr. Ray also added, “we celebrated the legacy of our Founders and the Omega men who guided us through our first century, and we dedicated ourselves to enhancing their legacy in our second century.”

Picture Left: Brother Marvin C. Brown, Sr.,(Lt. Colonel, Army, Ret.) joins his son, Brother Marvin C. Brown, Jr., in front of the entrance to the Science Hall at Howard University. The Browns represented a multi-generation of Omega families that attended the Centennial Conclave.
Multiple generations of Omega men greeted each other, shared stories and reminisced while impromptu stepshows dotted the landscape. As brothers received their service awards for 70, 50, 40, and 25 years of service to the Fraternity, one could see the joy from their smiles. During the Centennial Conclave, Brother Benjamin Spaulding was presented the 80 Year Service Award. He was intitated into Alpha Omega in 1931.

Today, the fraternity’s membership exceeds 125,000, in more than 700 undergraduate and graduate chapters throughout the United States, Canada, Asia, Europe, the Middle East and the Caribbean.

“Omega men have been and continue to be warriors in the pursuit of justice and equality. Community service and the uplift of others have long been a part of our DNA,” said Brother Ray.

Brother Rudolph V. Boone, Sr., 84, who joined the Fraternity in 1949 through Mu Psi Chapter at North Carolina A&T University said, “he saw Omega as a network of professional men and leaders who used their skills and resources to help others.”

“I was joining a group of men who had aspirations for high goals in life, as individuals and as a brotherhood,” added Boone, whose son Rudolph Jr., joined the fraternity in 1971 at North Carolina A&T State University. “I became deeply aware of what Omega men were doing on college campuses, on their jobs after completing college, and the contributions made in the communities in which they lived. Omega men were strong family men and effective leaders in all walks of life, and they did the things that inspired my desire to be the best that God made me to be,” he said.

“We experienced a moving moment in time as the spiritual strength of Omega was brought forth. We were truly blessed.”

The Fraternity and Bro. Jackson turn 100

Story by Bro. Milbert O. Brown, Jr., Assistant Editor to the Oracle

On February 22, 1911, nine months before Omega Psi Phi was started, a significant event occurred. A baby boy entered the world on that quiet wintry day. His parents proudly held him in their small wooden framed home.

The Jacksons welcomed their first child, Dosh, into the humble, but crowded confines of a two-bedroom house that they shared with another family. Dosh was born in the segregated reality of Macon, Georgia.

As Omega began its second century, a wiser Brother Dosh Jackson also starts his second century of life. “The Fraternity must set an example for future generations,” said Brother Jackson. According to Jackson “being 100 years old is not important, if you are unable to leave a positive example of living and service to others.” Brother Jackson is Life Member 284.

“I was inspired to join our Fraternity after spending five-days with Founder Bishop Edgar A. Love. I knew Omega was the organization I was going to be a part of,” said Brother Jackson. Jackson mentioned that he was the chauffeur for Bishop Love when he arrived in Atlanta to attend a conference as the guest of Bishop William A. Fountain, Sr.

“During my four-years as a student at Morris Brown College, I was Bishop Fountain’s and his son, Dr. William A. Fountain, Jr., the President of Morris Brown, personal chauffeur.

After returning to Macon from New York City, I formed a band called the Nighthawks and I played tenor sax for the group. I was just playing with the band at dances when he met the Fountains at a conference in Macon,” recalls Brother Jackson.
Dr. Fountain asked me, ‘Why aren’t you in school?’
I told him, “I couldn’t afford school.”
He then said ‘Do you want to go to school?’
I replied, “yes.”
The president said ‘you go home and get your bag.’

“I got my suitcase and I packed my one suit, and I drove them back to Atlanta from Macon in 1935. That’s how I got to Atlanta, the place I have been ever since,” said Brother Jackson.

Brother Jackson noted that during his week with Bishop Love, he was captured by his warm personality and his ability to make friends so easily.

Dosh Jackson said one of the more interesting stories Bishop Love told was when he and the other Founders were having problems working with Howard University’s administration in establishing the Fraternity as a national organization.

“Omega Psi Phi didn’t have a chapter at Morris Brown College, but it so just happened that all of my business classes were taught at Morehouse College by Professor J.B. Blayton, Omega’s Grand Keeper of Finance. I wanted to be an Omega, and I asked if I could be allowed to pledge through Morehouse’s Psi Chapter.”

After approaching Professor Blayton with my intentions and making a call to Bishop Love, I joined the Lampados Club with six other young men from Morris Brown. “For 11 months, I learned about Omega as a member of the Lampados Club and was initiated through Psi chapter on May 14, 1935,” said Brother Jackson.

Soon after his membership into Omega, Brother Dosh was one of the founders of Alpha Sigma Chapter at Morris Brown College. Later his younger brothers, Andrew and Wesley Jackson, joined Omega through Alpha Sigma. Brother Jackson’s son, Dosh, Jr., also joined Omega Psi Phi.

Brother Jackson commented that Brother Love and the Founders intended the Fraternity “to involve men working together within an organization that benefits the community, society and upholding the principles of manhood.

Unfortunately, there are many Brothers who join the Fraternity, and treat the organization like a social club. They are initiated and we do not see them anymore as participants in the Fraternity,” added Jackson.

After graduation from Morris Brown College, Brother Jackson joined Eta Omega Chapter in 1938. He later retired as a budget analyst with the U.S. Postal Service. Brother Jackson was also the owner of Jackson Electronics and was a member of the National Systems Contractors Association. Brother Dosh Jackson is the father of four children and is married to the former Juliette Lindsay.

Before joining Omega, Jackson witnessed the beginning of the Great Depression and the problems of segregation. “After finishing high school, I moved to New York City to work. Shortly, after my arrival in 1929, Wall Street crashed. That evening the company’s president lost $6 million, and he killed himself by jumping in the Hudson River. Out of work for over three months, I stood in the bread line outside of Father Divine’s building to get a meal,” said Jackson.

“Things got so bad I just went back home to Macon, after working as a cook in Maine,” laughed Jackson. As he returned to Macon in the early 1930s, he said, “Jim Crow was superior. If I walked on a public sideway, and a white women approached, I would have to get off the sideway until she passed. There was nothing first class available for Blacks—everything was secondary.

We had one theatre and if you were Black, then you had to enter from the back and go upstairs,” commented Jackson. He also said “In a way segregation was good because it forced us to communicate and stay together. Now, many of those who benefited from desegregation have forgotten where they came from. They have forgotten about their fellow man. Atlanta’s Dr. King never forgot how to connect to people and his fellowman,” noted Brother Jackson.

According to Brother Dosh Jackson “you do not grow old by living a number of years. You have to maintain a good mind, and in all things never give up hope. I still feel like I am 50.”
Omega’s Rededication

Celebrating 100 Years of Brotherhood and Service

Earlier, thousands of brothers arrived on campus to celebrate the Centennial Rededication Program in Washington, D.C. Brother Burnel E. Coulon, 31st Grand Basileus, and Brother Lloyd J. Jordan, 36th Grand Basileus, presented historical reflections of the Fraternity’s 100 years of brotherhood and service to communities worldwide.

Brother Dr. Andrew A. Ray, 39th Grand Basileus, delivered an emotional address held at Howard’s Cramton Auditorium. Due to overcrowding, some Omegas in attendance were directed to another building, while others stood outside as they witnessed history.

Words and pictures by Bro. Milbert O. Brown, Jr.

The brothers stood in the coolness of an autumn evening breeze. The still moments from the distinguished occasion on November 17, 2011, will be remembered for ages. One hundred years before, three Howard University undergraduate students Frank Coleman, Oscar J. Cooper and Edgar A. Love founded the Fraternity with assistance from their faculty advisor, Dr. Ernest E. Just.

The idea for the creation of Omega Psi Phi was organized at Howard University’s Thirkield (formerly Science) Hall, only a few steps from where Omega men stood on this perfect night.

After the program, Omega men walked in a quiet and dignified procession to the Founders Monument. Alpha Chapter (Howard University) brothers escorted the Fraternity’s Grand Officers through campus as they held two lit lanterns—one purple, and one gold. On this night of celebration and rededication, Omega men could view the glowing lights from Thirkield Hall building in the distance. The spirit of Omega’s brotherhood will never be forgotten, especially on this special night—the Fraternity’s 100th birthday.
Omega begins its second century of service

Omega men from throughout the United States as well as Europe, the Caribbean and the Middle East gathered in Minneapolis to celebrate the Fraternity’s first Grand Conclave of the organization’s second century.

The 78th Grand Conclave was held July 5-12, 2012 at the Minneapolis Convention Center. Under the theme, “Community Meets Character,” the biennial event focused on community service, youth mentoring, and philanthropic efforts, recognition of the fine arts and celebrating Omega’s decades of social action achievements.

“You came from far and near to extend the hand of Friendship and Fellowship with the best of humanity,” said Dr. Andrew A. Ray, the 39th Grand Basileus.

“We celebrated entering our second century of service and remain emboldened by the spirit and vision of our four Founders,” Ray said.

Dr. Ray was elected to another two-year term as Grand Basileus. Also earning re-election for a second two-year term were First Vice Grand Basileus Antonio F. Knox Sr. and Grand Counselor Christopher M. Cooper. Curtis A. Baylor was elected Grand Keeper of Records and Seal; W. Kelly Shannon was elected Grand Keeper of Finance; Tony Q. Cobb, Jr. was elected Second Vice Grand Basileus; and Donnel Jones, William Matthews and Leon Spencer were elected as Undergraduate Representatives to the Supreme Council.
Rev. Brother Jesse L. Jackson, Sr., (center) was the keynote speaker at the Brothers Only Dinner and Rededication Ceremony.

Dr. Christopher T. Curry will continue to serve as Grand Chaplain. A number of black-tie dinners, receptions, dances and community service efforts took place throughout the conclave.

Among the conclave highlights included a Youth Leadership Conference held at the University of Minnesota. The program provided leadership training for 100 young men throughout the United States. It targeted youth ages 8-18 and was facilitated by more than 25 Omega men.

Course offerings included self-esteem awareness, goal-setting and achievement, health and wellness, social and personal responsibility, family unity, academic excellence, and conflict resolution.

A Big Brothers Big Sisters (BBBS) Match Day was held on July 7 at the University of Minnesota. "Bigs and Littles," enjoyed breakfast together and discussed the importance of mentoring and setting goals.

Bigs and Littles also participated in activities designed to allow Bigs and Littles to develop a stronger connection. Activities also included a BBBS tailgate which celebrated college life and careers. Omega Psi Phi, Big Brothers Big Sisters and the President Obama Fatherhood Initiative Block Party took place at North Commons Park. The blockparty showcased the importance of mentoring and fatherhood in order to build strong communities and national leaders.

“We celebrated entering our second century of service and remain emboldened by the spirit and vision of our four Founders.”

Dr. Andrew Ray
Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc. was among the first Black-Greek Letter Organizations to give its support to the White House Fatherhood and Mentoring Initiative. The initiative focuses on the President’s ongoing effort to promote fatherhood and strengthen families and communities. Omega chapters worldwide continue to sponsor male mentoring programs and each year have awarded millions in scholarships to college students.

Rev. Jesse L. Jackson Sr., who has been an Omega man for more than 52 years, spoke during the “Brothers Only” dinner and rededication ceremony. Brother Jackson urged Omega men to continue efforts to uplift the African-American community that included registering people to vote and mentoring young males.

Also during the Grand Conclave, the Fraternity awarded over $110,000 in scholarships. The event marked the first Grand Conclave for several Omega men who reside in Great Britain. The young men were initiated during a special ceremony. The Grand Basileus was joined with a delegation of Omega men who also conducted the chartering event at the University of Birmingham in London.

Brother Ray said Omega was the first black fraternal organization to charter a chapter in England. “We are proud to say that Omega has invaded the British Empire,” he said. Brother Ray said the good work and community outreach performed by Omega men during the Minneapolis Grand Conclave will continue to yield dividends long after they have returned to their homes around the world.

In 1924, nearly 90 years ago, history was made in Paris. Omega Psi Phi’s William DeHart Hubbard ascended to the podium becoming the first African-American to win an Olympic gold medal in an individual event. Hubbard’s winning long jump on July 8, 1924, was a proud moment for Omega and Black people around the world.

Brother Hubbard was born in Cincinnati, Ohio on November 25, 1903. William had a spectacular high school track career. His academic abilities as well as his athletic gifts caught the attention of Lou Barringer, a University of Michigan alumnus. Interestingly, Hubbard attended Michigan after winning a newspaper subscription contest. In 1921, the Cincinnati Enquirer, one of Ohio’s largest newspapers, was running a subscription contest. The contest included 10 high school students in the newspaper’s circulation area.

The student, who could enlist the greatest number of new subscribers, would be awarded a $3,000 college scholarship to attend the school of his choice. Hubbard, with the support of some die-hard Michigan alumni, signed up the most new subscribers. He won the contest and enrolled at the University of Michigan with enough money for tuition.

According to Black Past: Remembered and Reclaimed, after Hubbard’s arrival on campus, he was not allowed to run varsity track. “He had a mediocre sophomore year, but during his junior year he won the 100-meter dash in 9.8 seconds and a long jump distance of 24 feet 10 inches.” At trials held at Harvard University, Brother Hubbard won a place on the United States 1924 Olympic team.

In 1924, the aura of the eighth modern Olympiad, made a profound impression on the 21-year old Hubbard. For Hubbard, participating in the Olympics could only be rivaled by the excitement of winning a gold medal.

His chances were almost erased on his first jump as Brother Hubbard hit the take-off board at top speed and his front spikes touched the ground, just beyond the board for a foul.
That was bad enough, but his heel was severely bruised due to countless practice jumps.

Contestants were given three preliminary trials, and those with the better marks received three final trials. On his second jump, with stakes raised higher because of the supersensitive bruised heel, Hubbard reached far enough out to make the finals. Later, still trailing in the competition, he started down the runway on his sixth and final jump. In stride and gaining speed, he hit the take-off board well and landed 24’ 5-1/2.” That jump propelled him into international prominence. A year after his Olympic gold, Brother Hubbard became the world record holder in the long jump. Also, in 1926, he tied the world record in the 100-yard dash.

Following his gold medal performance in Paris, William returned to school at Michigan.

While back on the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor campus, Brother Hubbard excelled in academics and was an active member of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. He was initiated through Phi Chapter. Brother D. R. Jones, Phi Chapter’s Editor, wrote about Brother Hubbard’s athletic achievements in the 1920s. Brother Hubbard has been featured in several of the Fraternity’s documented histories, and countless times in The Oracle.

In 1957, William DeHart Hubbard was voted into the National Track Hall of Fame. In 1960, Brother Hubbard, was voted one of the “Ten Greatest Athletes” at the University of Michigan. He was inducted into their Hall of Honor in 1979, and Ohio Track and Field Hall of Fame in 1985. Brother Hubbard entered Omega Chapter June 23, 1976.

In 2010, the brothers of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc. - Phi Chapter, established a scholarship fund honoring William DeHart Hubbard; with funds benefiting students who desire to pursue their academic endeavors at the University of Michigan. The scholarship is endowed through the University of Michigan and has a target goal of more than $100,000 in available funds.

Spectators from around the globe watched the Olympic Games in London. Eyes were glued to TV screens and Internet browsers on the highly anticipated heats that featured Jamaica’s Usain Bolt. Bolt, a five-time World and three-time Olympic gold medalist, follows the legacy of William DeHart Hubbard, an Omega man.

Omega’s Fennell trained by the “Red Tails” as a cadet

Story by Bro. Milbert O. Brown, Jr., Assistant Editor to the Oracle

While sitting at the dinner table eating with the family, my mother said she witnessed something strange. ‘I was in the yard feeding the chickens and I saw two fools flying a little plane—I thought they were going to fall out and kill my chickens.’ After a while I laughed, “Mama that was me in that plane.”

As Brother Frank Fennell recalls his adventures, a warm light peeked over the room’s blinds giving his stronger-than-average, 82-year old frame comfort as he perched in the wooden kitchen chair.

In real life and in fairy tales, it is often believed that special angels are dispatched from heaven with the mission of enriching a person’s life that might otherwise be unaccomplished and wasted. When Frank Fennell was born in 1930 as the next to youngest of seven children in a small town called Seguin near San Antonio, a celestial committee decided to fly down from heaven and help a little Texas kid who wore glasses fulfill his destiny.

“Daddy was a common laborer and Mama used to be the help for white folks—caring for their children, washing clothes and cooking. With all of us, my parents were just trying to scratch out a living,” said Brother Fennell.

After high school, Frank got a series of menial jobs working at Randolph Field, an Air Force Base near his home. “I knew I had something to offer, but I didn't know how to break out of it. I was shining white officers’ shoes in the barbershop and in the cafeteria on the base. Later I was working in a dry cleaning plant.
“If you want to know what hell is like—get a job in the summer at a dry cleaning plant in Texas,” laughed Fennell.

By all historical references, young Frank’s hand was programmed for a shovel, but heaven had something else in mind. Two episodes in Fennell’s life altered his direction—a plane ride and a coach who insisted he attend college.

“One day I was hitching a ride from the base and one of the young pilots gave me a lift. When we began going over a hill and a bumpy road in his yellow convertible, he said, ‘it’s just like going up in an airplane isn’t it?’

I said, “how would I know? I never have been up in an airplane. So he whips down a road to a little airfield, and we got in an open seated airplane.”

“As we begin to tool around the air,” he said, ‘do you know where you live, and do you think you could find it?’

“Do you see that water tower about five miles over there? Go to the next water tower and look to the right and my house is right down there. So he went about a mile, and banked the plane to the right and Mama was out in the yard feeding the chickens.”

The pilot said ‘you’d make a good navigator’ and I said, “What’s that?” ‘Well that’s the guy that directs the plane and tells the pilots where to go. ‘After that experience, I never thought anything else about it ” smiled Fennell.

I had been out of high school for two years when my coach met me on the street after leaving work at the dry cleaning plant. He said, ‘why aren’t you in college?’ and I answered “because I can’t afford it, then the coach replied ‘you got too much potential. If I get you a work-study scholarship to Tuskegee would you go?’

I said, “of course I’ll go, and that’s how I ended up at Tuskegee in ’49,” said Fennell. Five-years after his first plane ride, Fennell was commissioned as a 2nd lieutenant and an Air Force navigator. He graduated from Tuskegee Institute in 1953.

As a navigator, he flew over 13,000 flight hours; plotted air navigational missions over 100 countries and served in the Vietnam conflict. “I have been in Iran, Iraq, at the North Pole, South Pole, and on every continent. I have literally covered the world in a C130 or C-141 airplane as a World-Wide Transoceanic Navigator,” noted Brother Fennell. He retired from the U.S. Air Force with the rank of Lt. Colonel in 1974.

Like it was yesterday, ROTC Cadet Frank Fennell can recall the rich experiences of standing at attention before his instructor, Lt. Colonel Herbert Eugene Carter. “He was a short fellow—only about 5 feet 5, but he was a distinguished officer, and he carried himself in a dignified matter. I can’t imagine depicting Tuskegee Airmen in any other way” said Fennell.

Lt. Colonel Carter was Tuskegee Institute’s Professor of Military Science and Tactics (PMS&T) and an original member of the famed 99th Fighter Squadron, the Tuskegee Airman—the “Red Tails.” Another Tuskegee Airmen who served on staff during that time was Captain George “Spanky” Roberts. As a combat pilot, he was the second commanding officer of the 332nd Fighter Group.

“My heart was wrapped up in Tuskegee. The school has so much meaning for me. One night as a cadet sitting in the room with the guys, someone said they were interested in a fraternity.

They said that the Omegas were the toughest. The Ques on campus had a lot of fun, but they were the leaders—so that’s the reason I joined Omega,” said Brother Fennell. He was initiated through Lambda Epsilon Chapter in 1951.

Fennell landed in Alabama at the beginning of one of the most important periods in civil rights and military history. In 1949, the Air Force had been re-established as a new-armed service two-years earlier, and in May, the military began integrating.

Now in his autumn years, Brother Fennell relaxes on his comfortable black sofa talking to his wife, Bettye. As the trees surround his Columbia, Maryland, home, he remembers his experience with the “Red Tails” as a young cadet and Omega man.

Gamma Pi Chapter Leads Omega’s Salute to Forgotten Woman of Black History

Story by Brother James Alexander, Jr.

It may seem unusual that a fraternity would lead the way in honoring the legacy of a sorority woman, but when it comes to Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc. and Gamma Pi Chapter, that is not unusual. Two of the four Cardinal Principles of the Fraternity -- Scholarship and Uplift -- don’t have gender-eligibility requirements when it comes to whom Omega serves. That was evident when Gamma Pi Chapter observed Black History Month 2012 by joining forces with the American Automobile Association to honor the work and legacy of Nannie Helen Burroughs.

Who is Nannie Helen Burroughs? An overlooked African-American civil rights advocate, religious and education figure, she lived in the early 1900s in Washington, D.C. She was president of the Baptist Women’s Convention and established a school for Negro girls in the city in 1909. The school and a street are named in her honor in the nation's capital, and that is really the extent to which most people in the metro area know her. She is also an honorary member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc.

Gamma Pi’s involvement in today’s program is tied to the passion and perseverance of Brother James E. Wyatt, a 62-year-member of the Fraternity and a retired U.S. Army Colonel. Brother Wyatt has spent his years since retirement from the military researching Nannie Helen Burroughs’ background and persuading AAA and others to give her proper respect and attention, even if posthumously. AAA’s role as a partner with Gamma Pi and Omega Psi Phi is even more interesting. It was the result of Brother Wyatt’s research in which he discovered through a Library of Congress letter, that Nannie Helen Burroughs was mysteriously denied a $12 AAA membership in 1930. During that time, she was very outspoken and disagreed with the U.S. President’s direction on the plight of Negroes in America.

Gamma Pi Chapter Leads Omega’s Salute to Forgotten Woman of Black History

Brother Wyatt’s work and dedication resulted in a powerful, moving and informative Black History Month tribute to Nannie Helen Burroughs at Charles Herbert Flowers High School in Springdale, Maryland. The tribute was conducted as part of the chapter’s signature educational program --Project ENRICH. The program is a four-year program for Prince George's County students beginning in ninth grade. The students in the program participate in monthly lectures, seminars and academic enrichment sessions at Bowie State University in preparation for college.

Brother Willie Hines is director of Project ENRICH and worked closely with Brother Wyatt and AAA to merge the two efforts together to serve a double-edged purpose: to correct a wrong in Black history and use it as a “teachable moment” to highlight values Nannie Helen Burroughs espoused.
The highlight of the tribute -- which captured the interest of local media in attendance -- was the symbolic presentation of Nannie Helen Burroughs’ long-overdue AAA membership card posthumously on stage. AAA officials flew in from Florida to make the presentation. Local Nannie Helen Burroughs historian, Dr. Traki Taylor-Webb served as the “stand-in” for the late Ms. Burroughs in receiving the membership card, and she in turn presented the symbolic membership card to Brother Wyatt as a token for his efforts.

Like many people, including many who know their civil rights history:

“I had never heard of Nannie Helen Burroughs ... but what she was saying was work hard, be proud and lift others up with you.”

AAA Spokeswoman Ms. Yolanda Cade

Adding depth and emotion to the program and to Nannie Helen Burroughs’ values and legacy were the convincing and heartfelt testimonials of several Project ENRICH students, who spoke onstage about their experience in the program and how they have benefited from Project ENRICH.

One parent, Ms. Najmah Bass, said that Project ENRICH program has helped her children become better students. “My participation in this program has given me the tools to embark on a journey of success that is now easier for me to attain,” said one of the students.

Gamma Pi has almost 100 youth participating in the 2011-12 version of Project ENRICH. Following the Black History Month program, Brother Col. Wyatt presented the students and others to a more in-depth look at Nannie Helen Burroughs’ life.

AAA ended the ceremony with a formal presentation to Brother Wyatt and Gamma Pi Basileus Brother Gordon Everett, giving them a souvenir copy of the AAA membership card.

The Nannie Helen Burroughs AAA Member Card

Others who attended the historic program included: Omega Psi Phi’s (then) Second District Representative, Brother Kenneth E. Rodgers; Sylvia Cyrus, Executive Director of Association for the Study of African American Life and History; Burroughs School principal Rita Johnson; and Rev. James Coates, Pastor of Bethlehem Baptist Church and a pallbearer for Nannie Helen Burroughs in 1961.

A SHORT HISTORY OF NANNIE H. BURROUGHS

Nannie was born in Orange, Virginia, to the union of two former slaves in 1879. Her father, John was a Baptist preacher and farmer. Jennie, Nannie’s mother, shared household duties with her husband, John, and was a cook. During her early years, she attended school in Washington, D.C., later attending college at a historically black college, Eckstein-Norton University located in Kentucky.

While living in Louisville, she was a secretary for the Foreign Mission Boards of the National Baptist Convention. Nannie Helen Burroughs gained national attention after delivering a speech, “How the Sisters Are Hindered from Helping,” before the National Baptist Convention in 1900.

As a noted orator, Burroughs is remembered by history at the turn of the 20th century for her contributions in business, education and religion.
After two powerful tornados landed on June 1, 2011, the residents of Springfield, Massachusetts described the unusual weather event as unexpected as a thief in the night.

The twister-laden tornados churned the waters of the Connecticut River before touching land—damaging hundreds of homes, toppling trees and leaving four people dead.

The City of Springfield is the site of the famed National Basketball Association’s Hall of Fame. More than 26,000 residents did not experience the bright lights of the NBA Hall’s mystique, as their homes were without electricity for several days.

Within hours of the aftermath, Omega’s Delta Chi Chapter arrived in their purple and gold work attire. Enthused by a strong commitment to serve the community, the men of Delta Chi provided a quick response in the assistance of relief efforts.

The chapter was central to the recovery process as their hands removed fallen tree limbs that rested on neighborhood homes and vehicles.

As they bent their backs, their glove-covered fingers moved through the ruins of broken glass, trees, and dirt. The brothers were reminded that their work in the community demonstrated the principle of “Uplift.”

The brothers were assisted by the Department of Public Works in clearing blocked streets crowded with debris. Also, joining Delta Chi brothers in this community service project were young mentees from the chapter’s Bridge to Manhood program.

With so many lives upended and dreams ruined, city officials mobilized a citywide campaign that provided food and supplies to those affected. The spirit of “we care” motivated Delta Chi’s brothers, as they aided in the recovery efforts through a rare storm that affected so many residents.

Chi Omicron Sponsors Boy Scout Campout

NEW HAVEN, CT- The Chi Omicron Chapter partnered with the Boy Scouts of America in forming the chapter’s first Boy Scouts Campout Expedition.

Chi Omicron’s Brother Mike Fletcher and Brother Alonzo Ricks led a group of boys from New Haven on a one-week long camping expedition. The campout grounds were located at Camp Sequassen in New Hartford, CT.

Similar to Omega, the mission of the Boy Scouts of America is to prepare young people to make ethical and moral choices over their lifetimes by instilling in them the values of the Scout Oath and Law. The young scouts also learned the rules of the outdoors during the campout event.

According the Boy Scouts of America’s Outdoor Code, it states: “As an American I will do my best to:

1. Be clean in my outdoor manners.
2. Be careful with fire.
3. Be considerate in the outdoors.
4. Be conservation-minded.”

Undoubtedly, Chi Omicron’s first Scout Campout Expedition provided each scout, a lasting memory, and their outdoor experience will be indelibly etched into their mind for years to come.

The camp provided the scouts with an opportunity to explore the outdoors, while offering them an alternative as well as traditional social activities.

The boys also learned basic scout survival techniques, leadership skills and the importance of education. For many of the boys, this trip was their first time away from home and their first campout experience.

Neal’s leadership helped to establish the Firebirds as one of the best track and field teams in the Washington and Baltimore region. Prominent officials such as the Mayor of Gaithersburg, the County Executive of Montgomery County and the Governor of Maryland have recognized the Firebirds.

Coach Neal served for 28 years coordinating youth activities for the Montgomery County Recreation Department. During the year, in addition to his work at the recreation department, he coached track, youth football, basketball and soccer teams.

THE DRESSING ROOM

On March 28, 2012, Pi Omega contributed 16 women’s business suits. The chapter’s Dressing Room Project is a program sponsored by Women Behind the Community, Inc. The Dressing Room provides three outfits of clothing “free-of-charge” to clients coming from welfare to work or near-poverty situations that would not allow them to purchase suitable wardrobes for the workplace. The clients are referred to the Dressing Room by authorized employment agencies and/or training programs. The Dressing Room assists its clients in selecting an appropriate outfit for the job interview. If the client is hired, the client is allowed to return to the Dressing Room to select additional outfits.

ARUNDEL ELEMENTARY SCHOOL PROJECT

On March 29, 2012, Pi Omega Chapter donated a laminating machine to Valencia Jones's Kindergarten class at Arundel Elementary/Middle School. Arundel Elementary/Middle School is located in Baltimore’s Cherry Hill neighborhood. The children were in need of a laminating machine to laminate literacy and math games, and activity cards to make them more durable. The students will use the activity cards and games throughout the entire school year.

SARAH’S HOUSE

On April 3, 2012, Pi Omega Chapter contributed 35 men’s suits, 16 women’s suits, and a variety of other clothing items. The mission of Sarah’s House is to provide safe shelter, daily meals, personal as well as professional casework support for those in need. In the spirit of the biblical figure, Sarah’s House welcomes with hospitality those who come to the house and tries to offer a sense of hope in the face of homelessness. Located on the edge of the Fort George G. Meade Army base, Sarah’s House accommodates up to 125 people daily, in a combination of emergency shelter and transitional housing.

R.U.L.E.S. FOR BLACK MEN SYMPOSIUM

Pi Chapter, the undergraduate chapter on the campus of Morgan State University hosted the 2nd Annual Restoring-Uplifting-Leadership-Education-Success (R.U.L.E.S.) For Black Men Symposium on November 19, 2011.

The event was held on the campus of Morgan State University in Baltimore, Maryland. The conference was designed to help young men rise above negative stereotypes and become productive assets to their respective communities.

The day long male-only event aims to empower underrepresented male groups through collaborative learning and group building. The symposium tackles specific issues and concerns affecting African-American males by way of panel discussions, age-focused workshops, and breakout sessions.

With an attendance of over 300 males ranging from nine years and older, the brothers of Pi Chapter strive to guarantee that the next generation of male leaders will be well-equipped with the tools needed for great success.

R.U.L.E.S won the Program of the Year Award in 2010 and the Chapter was asked by Morgan State Administration to turn the program into an annual conference due to the success of the event and positive feedback.

SOLES4SOULS

In February 2012, Pi Chapter launched its “Soles4Souls” campaign to collect funds and monetary donations to help change the lives of others across the world. The event was held on the campus of Morgan State University in Baltimore, MD.

Soles4Souls is a Nashville-based nonprofit that distributes shoes to people in need throughout the world. Soles4Souls has given away over 5.5 million pairs of shoes since 2005.
Omega Chapters Present Forum Highlighting Domestic Violence

In New York City, Omega’s Epsilon, Epsilon Pi and Omicron Chapters collaborated with the Brooklyn Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, in hosting the Fourth Annual Domestic Violence Awareness Forum.

The event was held at the Brooklyn campus of Long Island University (LIU). The focus of the program was to educate young people on the perils of domestic abuse.

The Fraternity made Domestic Violence Awareness one of its international initiatives four years ago after Epsilon Chapter hosted the first forum. Since the first forum, Epsilon Chapter has continued to host the program annually and remains committed to addressing this important issue.

“This year we wanted to involve our undergraduate men from Omicron Chapter and take the forum to a college campus,” said the Basileus of Epsilon Chapter, Brother Charles Coleman, Jr.

The highlight of this year’s Domestic Violence Forum was the keynote address by Brooklyn District Attorney Charles J. Hynes. Hynes shared his personal story of growing up in a household where he witnessed his mother being abused by his father. His touching remarks were underscored by his commitment to fighting domestic violence. District Attorney Hynes also discussed the work he had done in establishing the Brooklyn Family Justice Center for those affected by domestic violence.

The District Attorney also noted that he implemented the nation’s first Domestic Violence Unit in the Prosecutor’s office.

“Because of the alarming numbers of young people involved in domestic abuse situations, it is critical that we reach out to college-aged students. We want them to be able to recognize the signs of an abusive relationship early, and know what to do and where they can go,” said Brother Coleman.

The program also featured candid testimonials from the audience as well as a spoken word contribution from Long Island University student, Katherine George.

“October is Domestic Violence Awareness month, and we firmly believe the messages delivered through this forum will carry on well after the conference. Domestic violence is serious, it happens too often, and we need to be cognizant, and proactive every day,” said Epsilon Chapter’s Brother Ervin C. Roberson, II.

Chi Rho’s Domestic Violence Walk-A-Thon

Chi Rho Chapter hosted its 3rd Annual Purple Footsteps Against Domestic Violence Walk-A-Thon in Deer Park, NY.

The purpose of the event was to raise awareness against domestic violence in our communities throughout Suffolk County, Long Island.

Funds raised from the event will be used to support programs and organizations that assist domestic violence victims.

These programs include, but are not limited to, The Suffolk County Coalition Against Domestic Violence, and Chi Rho Development Corporation.

Domestic violence is a problem in our communities and is especially increasing among our adolescent population.

The funds will also go toward building programs exclusively geared towards families and teenagers. Sessions will teach preventative measures, coping skills, anger management and group therapy in eliminating violent behavior. Improper behavior, both physical and or non-physical leads to domestic violence.

Tau Pi Chapter’s Rededication Celebrates 36 Years of Service to the Community

It was on a gray and chilly wintery afternoon in January 1975, when 16 men gathered for the first meeting in the comfort of a modest room. They were simply re-engaging a bond that each had once taken separately under diverse circumstances and at different times in life. They were together that memorable afternoon to plant a seed.

Most of the men assembled at the meeting had never met one another before. The men from various backgrounds had one thing in common—they were men of Omega.

On April 19, 1975, after a few meetings in Columbia, Maryland, 16 Omega men founded a new chapter, Tau Pi. The chapter celebrated their 36th anniversary and service to the greater Howard County, Maryland area on April 20, 2011.

The chapter of doctors, soldiers, scholars, kings and, common men held their Rededication Ceremony at the Jeffers Hill Neighborhood Center in Columbia. Brother Robert W. McGlotten, Jr. served as the Master of Ceremony as a room of Ques patiently listened.

“Omega’s 100th year Conclave was the catalyst for our rededication this year, and we hope this will become an annual chapter signature program,” said Brother Dr. Julius Chapman, the chairman.

The ceremony rekindled the spirit of brothers as they prepared for centennial events. Some of the highlights were Brother Carl L. Haggins sharing his experiences as an undergraduate Omega at Virginia State College.

Brother Charles L. Brown, another SAGE brother, also presented his impressions of the chapter’s development. Bro. Brown joined Omega at Florida A&M College in 1951, as part of Upsilon Psi Chapter. The brothers were also enriched when four brothers, who were initiated into the chapter spoke. They represented four different decades of the chapter’s existence.

The generational speakers that represented each decade included: Brother Calvin C. Zellars, 1970s; Brother A. Clinton Sellers, 1980s; Brother Frank L. Miles, 1990s and Brother Eric J. Clark, 2000s.

Some of the chapter’s service to the community includes a well-defined youth mentorship program, food and clothing drives for the disadvantaged, educational Black History programs, a health fair and blood drive at local hospital facilities.

Throughout the chapter’s history, members have served on district and international offices and committees.

“It was a honor to receive such a distinguished award from my school. I grew up around Shaw University and it has been a major part of my life. I try to give as much back to Shaw as it has given to me,” said Brother Allen.
Several Omegas from throughout the Sixth District conducted the annual Boys' Summer Leadership Camp. The 2012 camp was held at the YMCA Camp Hanes in King, NC. Over 175 North Carolina and South Carolina young males from a variety of socio-economic backgrounds were participants.

Some of the camp activities included: horseback riding, swimming, nature hikes, crafts, team sports, battle-ball, alpine climbing tower and water ziplining. Omega men provided the young males with educational sessions in CPR training, conflict resolution, etiquette training and healthy decisions.

Brother Dr. Anthony T. Spearman named NAACP Minister of the Year

“Our Minister of the Year Award goes to a person who understands and attempts to live out the calling of God,” said Rev. Dr. William J. Barber, president of the North Carolina NAACP State Conference.

At the General Assembly in May 2010, Rev. Spearman was arrested as part of the “State of Emergency Seven.” He and others were demanding that the state budget not be balanced on the backs of the poor.

Brother Spearman has fought vigorously for the rights of workers to organize, against the death penalty, reforming the criminal justice system and improving education for all children.

When asked how he felt upon receiving the award, Dr. Spearman said, “I do not engage in the civil rights struggle for awards sake. I am gripped by the thought that people across the state of North Carolina valued the efforts I have made during the year. Love motivates me to do the work of justice.”

Brother Dr. T. Anthony Spearman serves Omega as the Basileus of Delta Nu Chapter.

During June 2012, Upsilon Gamma Gamma Chapter completed two major social action events in the city of Augusta, GA.

The chapter participated in Operation Giving Back, a clothes drive and were servers at a food kitchen. Both activities were significant to the community and were part of the Fraternity’s mandated programs. Operation Giving Back held at Grace Street Church of Christ provided over 200 people with clothing items. This was the third year the chapter has collected clothing for the less fortunate.

The chapter joined the Golden Harvest Food Bank, and Master’s Table Soup Kitchen in feeding Augusta’s homeless. The brothers served hot lunches and many brothers brought their children to participate in the community service project.

The experience gave them a life lesson in helping others who are less fortunate. Brothers helped set up the facility, wash dishes, and perform various other duties throughout the day.

Over 400 guests were served during the event. Many of the personnel who served food to the homeless on a regular basis asked the men of Omega for future support at other events within the community.

Miami Gardens, FL- On Saturday June 18, 2012, the brothers of Sigma Alpha Chapter joined Antioch Missionary Baptist Church’s Feeding & Clothing Ministry, in helping distribute clothes and food to needy families. During the one-day event, over 92 families were provided food.
Eta Rho’s Drew Blood Drive Helps Community

St. Petersburg, FL—Omega Psi Phi Fraternity’s Eta Rho Chapter, held its annual Dr. Charles R. Drew Memorial Blood Drive at the Sweetbay Supermarket on April 23, 2012.

Over 20 chapter brothers attended the event with several residents donating blood. The blood drive accumulated over 17 units of blood and an additional four units of blood plasma.

As a medical researcher and physician, Brother Drew was selected as the first Black surgeon chosen as an examiner on the American Board of Surgery.

During World War II, Dr. Drew’s research helped to improve blood transfusions and blood bank storage.

His work with the United States Blood for Britain project led to the creation of the American Red Cross Blood Bank. Unfortunately, Brother Drew died due to injuries sustained as a result of an auto accident. Many myths surround Brother Drew’s death and the medical care he received. Brother Dr. Charles Drew joined Omega Chapter in 1950.

Lawrenceville, GA—Beta Lambda Lambda Chapter partnered with The BLL Experience during their April 2012 March of Dimes event. Over 18 chapter members volunteered at the Gwinnett County March for Babies as they prepared tents and tables for the event.

In keeping with the chapter’s efforts to provide high school students with an opportunity to strengthen their college profiles with community service activities, school-aged children worked with brothers during the event.

At the beginning of the year, the chapter participated in the building project with Habitat for Humanity in Gwinnett County. “This was a valuable opportunity to align the Omega brand with a highly respected organization like Habitat for Humanity. The experience increases the chapter’s profile and people’s awareness about the great things the chapter is doing in the community,” said Brother Chris Houston.

Omicron Iota Iota’s service impacts the community

In the first city of Kansas, there is a place dedicated to “Unity: For the Love of ALL People,” this is the motto of the Richard Allen Cultural Center and Museum in Ft. Leavenworth.

For over 15 years, Omicron Iota Iota Chapter has had a partnership with the Allen Cultural Center and Museum. Since 1994, the chapter has provided structured academic assistance for the center’s after school tutoring program.

The center offers a glimpse into the history of African-Americans, both locally and nationally. The Allen Cultural Center was created to ensure that the rich heritage of African-Americans would not be lost in the heartland of Kansas.

Some of the center’s programming presents awareness about African-American history through cultural activities. Also, through research and presentations, the center helps to improve interracial understanding.

Phyllis Bass, affectionately called “Mother Bass,” serves as the center’s director. She has been honored by the chapter several times as its Citizen of the Year Award recipient. The community and Omicron Iota Iota are forever indebted to Ms. Bass for establishing an environment for learning.

The chapter is also involved in working with troubled youth at the Atchison Youth Residential Center (AYRC) in Ft. Leavenworth. The facility director is Omicron Iota Iota’s Brother Johnnie Jones.

Brothers have shared their stories of failure and success, so that the youth understand life experiences and problem-solving skills.

The Omegas of Omicron Iota Iota are recognized as stable male role models and mentors. The chapter also provides social opportunities to the population as methods for reducing delinquency.
Omicron Xi’s Bro. Rice wins journalism award

Brother Glenn E. Rice, of Omicron Xi Chapter was the recipient of the Gannett Foundation Award for Innovation in Watching Journalism. The National Association of Black Journalists at their annual convention held August 2011, in Philadelphia presented the award.

Brother Rice and another reporter investigated the unsolved homicide of Leon Jordan – a Kansas City civil rights leader. Jordan was a co-founder of the influential Freedom Inc. political group and one of Missouri’s most powerful black politicians. Jordan was gunned down during the early morning hours on July 15, 1970, outside his Green Duck Tavern.

Despite a massive investigation at the time, the case was never solved to the satisfaction of the county prosecutor -- until recently. The police investigation, which mirrored many of The Star’s findings in a series of articles, found that the Italian mafia and a group of black gangsters both appeared to have played a role in the conspiracy that led to Jordan’s slaying.

Brother Rice has been a reporter for the Kansas City Star since 1988. He serves Omega as the Public Relations and Communications Chair and is a former Eighth District Representative.

Beta Upsilon Chapter’s Project Manhood influences the dream of a little boy

A Boy’s Dream

Omega Psi Phi’s Beta Upsilon Chapter continued their 10 year old tradition of preparing and delivering Thanksgiving dinners to the St. Francis Homeless Shelter in Omaha, NE. The dinners were packaged at Mount Mariah Church on November 24, 2012.

(Picture on right)

The chapter’s most influential project encompassing youth involvement in the Omaha community is its Project Manhood.

The brothers share their lessons with the children, both after school and during monthly evening meetings at Central Park Elementary.

Some of the project activities include exposing the young students to business leaders at various venues. “I feel that visits in the community are essential for the participant learning process.

It’s one thing to hear about business practices, but it is different to go outside of the classroom and meet with business executives in their environment,” said Brother Trevis Sallis, the coordinator of Project Manhood.

Eight-years old, Nicholas Banks was a participant in the chapter’s after school Project Manhood. At the time Nicholas Banks was a third grade student at Central Park Elementary School. “I was taught the lessons of being a man. I learned how to tie a tie, stand up at a dinner table when a woman arrives, business attire and professionalism,” recounts Nicholas.

Now an adult, Nicholas Banks also said, “I never forgot the impact the Omegas had on me. As I became older, I had a desire to also help others.”

Banks recalls that during his childhood, “most young boys dreamed of becoming athletes, who were featured on television.

My friends’ walls were graced with big posters, and their wardrobe of overpriced apparel was their attempt to mirror their favorite heroes.”

No one in Nicholas’ family was affiliated with a Greek-lettered organization. Because of his experiences with Omegas at his school during a young age, Nicholas wanted to be a Que.

On April 2, 2011, Nicholas’ boyhood dreams were fulfilled; he became an Omega—first influenced by the men of Beta Upsilon Chapter.

Chapters help children prepare for school

Psi Alpha Chapter and Alpha Delta Lambda logged over 200 hours in the collection of school supplies for children in the greater San Antonio area.

During the start of each school year, some students are unable to afford needed supplies. The combined efforts of the two chapters help to establish one the largest school supply drives in the southern Texas area.

The chapters gave cash donations, secured items from a variety of merchants and maintained a warehouse for the school supplies. They also used a school bus to help transport the school items to the selected schools.

Another back to school initiative that the chapter has been involved with since 2003 is the Free Haircut Program. The idea for the haircuts came from a Psi Alpha brother who had spent a great deal of time mentoring students at Carroll Elementary School. It was brought to his attention that many male students were unable to get a new haircut before the start of school. Crowds of children excited about the upcoming school year sat patiently with family members waiting for their haircuts.

The brothers of Psi Alpha Chapter, in association with the Williams Barber College, offered free haircuts to area students. In addition to the chapter paying for over 500 haircuts for students, all barbers were provided lunch.

A Psi Alpha brother commented that the barbershop environment is an experience and a good haircut provides self-esteem for many young students.

The chapter sponsors the Roosevelt Junior Roughriders, a youth football and cheer organization, in the Texas Youth Football Association. The chapter donates over $500 each year to assist with replacing equipment and is actively involved in mentoring several of the players.

Omega’s Delta Xi and Theta Theta team up for Breast Cancer awareness

Dallas, TX - Breast cancer is one of the most recognized forms of cancer, with over 1.3 million people diagnosed annually.

Sadly, a cure for this potentially deadly disease has not been found. In an effort to raise funds to find a cure for this affliction, members of the Theta Theta and Delta Xi chapters solicited funds and participated in the Susan G. Komen for the Cure 5K walk to promote awareness.

Several members set aside June 11, 2012, to help raise over $1,500 to help this cause, while enjoying each other’s camaraderie.

The North Texas affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure has been organized since 1991. This year’s walk consisted of over 15,000 participants. The funds that were raised will assist in promoting breast cancer awareness, early screenings and advancing treatment options.

The Theta Theta chapter of Omega Psi Phi fraternity was founded in 1972 on the campus of East Texas State University (now Texas A&M – Commerce) and the Delta Xi Chapter was established in Greenville, TX in 1985. The two chapters assist in supporting community efforts in the northeast corridor of the Dallas-Fort Worth Metro area.

Alpha Delta Lambda Chapter promotes literacy and scholarship

San Antonio, TX - On July 23, 2012, the Alpha Delta Lambda Chapter located at the University of Texas at San Antonio hosted their annual “Teacher Supplies Salvage Sale.”

This event was held on campus and one of the main objectives was to assist new teachers. The chapter donated hundreds of books to teachers in order to promote literacy and scholarship.

The books came from libraries, schools and various businesses in the local area. The chapter collected an intellectual treasure trove of items including picture books, novels, history books and interactive style books.

Participants were able to enter the room filled with educational resources and were able to depart with boxes of free books. Small donations were accepted. Proceeds from the event provided monies for a college scholarship for a local high school student.

Parents and students showed up early, and there was a line well-before the event opened. Teachers were very excited to organize their classrooms with the books and other educational materials.

The items helped put an assault on illiteracy in the San Antonio area. The Alpha Delta Lambda Chapter hosts this event every year and it has proven to be a great success.

Gamma Eta Chapter shines Omega’s light on the campus of the University of Arkansas - Fayetteville

The brothers of Gamma Eta Chapter at the University of Arkansas-Fayetteville (UAF) realize that first impressions are lasting ones to students on “The Hill.” Many incoming freshmen will arrive on campus as young, impressionable students.

They will be watching the Omegas every move. With that in mind, the brothers of the Gamma Eta were eager to exhibit their actions and their words: Manhood, Scholarship, Perseverance, and Uplift at the 2012 NPHC Interest Gathering.

The event was held on August 23, 2012. An integral part of the program involved an active representation of each NPHC fraternity and sorority on a panel discussion for all interested students. Students asked very diverse questions, including learning about each organization, as each panelist described the history of their organizations, both nationally, and locally at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

An extremely friendly environment was facilitated as the student attendees were comfortable asking several questions to the Greek panelists.

Some of the questions asked were:
1) How should you let a fraternity/sorority know that you are interested without being too forward?

2) What have you gained from joining an NPHC organization…and why did you join your organization?

3) What is hazing and does your organization haze?

4) How much does it cost to join an NPHC organization?

5) What do you look for when considering a new member?

6) What requirements are needed to join your organization?

7) Does your fraternity/sorority offer scholarships?

Brother Booker was one of the panelists that provided thoughtful and insightful commentary, which was well received by all of the students in attendance.

To conclude the event, students were invited to visit with each NPHC chapter at their respective exhibition tables. The Gamma Eta Chapter had an impressively decorated table that included a wood-lacquer Fraternity shield, gold boots and several District and International publications.

It was not surprising that the Gamma Eta brothers were inundated with interactions during this NPHC post-program reception.

Theta Chi Chapter presents Annual Que-nic Scholarship Awards

Theta Chi Chapter hosted its 17th Annual Scholarship Que-nic. The event was started to provide resources to supplement the chapter’s annual scholarship fund for local youth that were graduating from high school and needed additional financial support to enter college.

Theta Chi Chapter has demonstrated a commitment to adhering to the Fraternity’s mandate (Scholarship) that is critical in uplifting our youth.

There is a tremendous amount of pride that goes into this event every year. The event also is a demonstration of the commitment that Omega Psi Phi Fraternity and Theta Chi Chapter has toward preparing our youth for the future.

Several types of contributions have allowed the chapter to keep costs down over the years, resulting in more funding for scholarships.

Brother Darryl Jones Receives U.S. Patent Award

Story by Brother Keith D. Bullock

Brother Darryl L. Jones was the recipient of an award from the United States Patent Office. Jones was presented the honor for his participation in the design and development of the Cord Wrap and Power Plug Receptacle Arrangement for the Temporary Mobility Kit (TMK).

The growing trend today among automobile manufacturers is to reduce vehicle weight and comply with or surpass fuel economy requirements. The lightweight TMK helps address this issue by replacing the heavier spare wheel and tire assembly.

While the TMK is compact in size, it includes a dual-purpose air compressor and tire-sealing system to temporarily repair a damaged tire until it can be permanently repaired or replaced. The TMK is, indeed, a game-changer for immediate tire repair however; it did not have a practical electrical cord storage mechanism which made it difficult to return the TMK to its intended storage space after use.

Brother Jones and his colleagues resolved this issue by incorporating two things: (1) a peripheral channel, in the TMK’s housing, about which the cord portion of the electrical plug assembly is wrapped; and (2) a plug-receiving aperture to retain the plug. These two modifications eliminated the need for extra effort, on behalf of the user, to re-store the electrical cord.

Brother Jones is a Product Global Wheel and Tire Engineer in the Chassis Engineering Division of Ford Motor Company in Dearborn, Michigan. He is a native of Chicago, Illinois and founder/CEO of Eccentric Marketing -- a premier nationwide event marketing, planning, and promotional firm.

Brother Jones volunteers his time positively impacting youth in the metro Detroit community by working with the Detroit Area Pre-College Engineering Program (DAPCEP); National Society of Black Engineers (NSBE) and Think Detroit/PAL organizations.

Brother Darryl Jones received his Mechanical Engineering degree from the Alabama A&M University. He is also an active and dedicated member of Tau Kappa Kappa Chapter in Southfield, Michigan.

Brother Jones has also served on the chapter’s executive board as the Keeper of Records and Seal (KRS) and Vice-Basileus. He currently serves as the Tenth District Social Action Committee Chair and the Assistant District KRS.

He was a past recipient of the Tau Kappa Kappa Chapter’s Omega Man of the Year and Superior Service of the Year Awards.
Omega brothers share the “Gift of Life”

In April 2005, Epsilon Rho’s Brother Jerome Bill Aiken was diagnosed with chronic kidney disease, which would change his life forever.

From dialysis to chemotherapy in November 2005, Brother Aiken decided to inform the brothers of the troubling news. After hearing the news, Brother Simon Shannon decided to be tested in hopes of assisting Brother Aiken.

He discovered that he was a match for a possible transplant. In 2006, Brother Aiken received a new kidney from Brother Shannon at Hennepin County Medical Hospital.

Once he was healthy, Brother Aiken was determined to become involved with the National Kidney Foundation (NKF).

He was nominated and elected to NFK local Board of Directors in 2010, which covers Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas (North and South); he is currently the board chair. In 2011, he was elected to the NFK 2012 National Board of Directors for two terms beginning in February, 2012.

Brother Aiken is also the chairman of the NFK’s National Leadership Council Committee. Today, he often speaks at the Hennepin County DaVita Dialysis Center where he uplifts patients and their families by sharing his experience with kidney disease.

“My personal goal is to help educate the public about various aspects of kidney disease. I reach out to local organizations, churches and communities to educate individuals about the rise in kidney disease among minority communities. Since prevention is a key piece to this puzzle, I also educate about ways to prevent kidney disease,” said Brother Jerome B. Aiken.

Brother Bobby Robinson says he is blessed to have a family and Fraternity brothers that care, visiting him at the hospital regularly. He also said the cards were numerous from Nu Omega Chapter and members of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority’s Alpha Rho Omega Chapter, where his wife, Bunice Robinson, is a member.

Brother Branden Robinson is active with Nu Omega Chapter, serving on some of the same committees his father did prior to becoming ill. Brother Bobby Robinson was initiated into the Fraternity in 1976, at Detroit’s Nu Omega Chapter. His son, Brother Branden Robinson was initiated into the Fraternity in 2009, also through Nu Omega Chapter. The Robinsons are not just a father and son; they are Omega brothers who share an organ.
Chapters promote health initiatives

Story by Bro. Eddie R. Cole

Nu Alpha Alpha Chapter hosted its citywide Barbershop Health Fair on January 21, 2012.

The chapter’s health fair was held at three African-American owned barbershop shops in Bloomington, IN. At the Hoosier Barbershop, Angela’s Ebony Designs and College Town Cutters. Healthcare professionals provided free blood pressure and diabetes screenings.

“The barbershop has always been a place where we discuss a variety of topics. Instead of trying to get our men to the healthcare providers, we thought we would bring the healthcare providers to them at the barbershop,” said Brother Alrick Banks, Nu Alpha Alpha’s Social Action Chairman.

The barbershop has always been a bastion in the African-American community. The locale was used as an outreach station to make the community aware of services that can impact them.

The event was also designed to provide valuable health services and information to the community.

Epsilon Rho Chapter holds its first Prostate Cancer Symposium

Minneapolis, MN—Epsilon Rho Chapter held its first Prostate Cancer Symposium on April 23, 2012 at the Northside YMCA.

Henry Crosby, Executive Director of the YMCA, was a most gracious host, allowing the chapter to invite health care professionals that treat prostate cancer patients. The symposium included educational films, pamphlets and other materials, and free screening passes for the attendees.

Also in attendance were men of Turning Point, a treatment program, designed to help men overcome drug and other related problems.

The community expressed extreme gratitude that the Fraternity would take the lead in such an important event affecting African American men. Prostate Cancer is the number one killer of African-American men.

The chapter’s Health Initiative Committee also participated in the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority’s Health Awareness Day. Epsilon Rho was a co-sponsor of the Inaugural Gala For Children with Autism. Proceeds from the Gala were used to allow qualifying families, who have children with autism, to access a network comprised of 12 holistic providers.
Rho Gamma Gamma holds health fair

Chicago, IL—Rho Gamma Gamma Chapter held its annual Health Fair and Blood Drive on June 9, 2012 at the Cosmopolitan Community Church. The event provided the community with a vital health screening and on-site check-ups. The chapter’s event also featured a blood drive collection.

In September 2011, the chapter participated in the SEA Blue Prostate Cancer Walk/Run. The causes of prostate cancer are not fully understood, although it is believed that multiple factors can contribute to one’s overall risk, including family background, ethnicity, diet, and environmental factors.

Prostate cancer is two times higher in men whose father or a brother has been diagnosed with the disease. African-American men who are age 40 and diets high in fat, may increase the likelihood of developing prostate cancer due to increased testosterone, which stimulates prostate cell growth. The goal of Rho Gamma Gamma Chapter is to help raise awareness and funds for prostate cancer research.

The brothers of Zeta Epsilon Chapter co-sponsored a film and discussion session with Indiana University’s Black Graduate Student Association on January 24, 2012. The featured film presented at Indiana University’s Bloomington campus was the 1995 socially conscious, Higher Learning.

“The film ignited conversation about alarming issues regarding stereotypes, education, and the future of our society as it moves forward,” said Brother Elijah Moon of Zeta Epsilon.

Brother Eddie R. Cole, a doctoral candidate in Higher Education and Student Affairs at Indiana, facilitated the discussion. Topics included the lack of African-American representation on campus and supportive campus programs, among other topics pertaining to race.

Report by Brother Andrew Bailey
Zeta Rho Chapter of Los Angeles, CA., expanded their Ernest E. Just Youth Science Program to a summer bi-weekly program. The expansion of the program was made possible by a grant from the American Honda Foundation.

Youth participants now have classroom sessions once a month, with additional field exploration trips to California’s premier science facilities.

African-American and Latino students have traditionally been under-represented in Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (STEM) disciplines. Researchers have identified lack of preparation, access, exposure and awareness of STEM subject matter as primary factors that contribute to the low trajectories for minority youth.

Since 1999, nearly 400 middle school aged youth of color have benefitted from participating in Zeta Rho Chapter’s Ernest E. Just Youth Marine Science Program.

Currently, the program spans over six days and two consecutive weekends and involves trips to the Point Vicente Interpretive Center at Rancho Palos Verdes, California, the Bolsa Chica Conservancy at Huntington Beach, California and the Long Beach Aquarium of the Pacific.

The program also provides students with a three-day sleep-over at the University of Southern California’s Wrigley Marine Science Center at Catalina Island.

The University of Southern California trip is conducted annually for 30 middle school-aged boys and girls, many of whom lack the financial resources for participation.

The Just Youth Marine Science Program also exposes targeted youths to careers and academic pursuits in STEM disciplines, while building confidence and practical skills. The goal is to increase student’s knowledge about math and science.

Omega Gents Program mentors male students

Oakland CA- For over 60 years, the men of Sigma Iota have been a beacon of light that has provided service to the City of Oakland and the Greater Bay area communities. One of the chapter’s major activities is the Omega Gents Mentoring Program.

The needs of African-American male students are addressed through the program. Omega Gents is a mentoring program designed around the Fraternity’s cardinal principles.

The goal of the program is to teach and encourage young men to plan and define the direction for their future. Monthly educational workshops, quarterly social or cultural events, counseling, coaching and networking are all important components of the program.

Omega Gents Tutoring Services concentrates on identifying any academic problem areas, addressing these areas, and tracking improvement. Key areas of academic focus are mathematics, science, english, and history.

Each student will generate challenging, yet obtainable goals and benchmarks. Students have a detailed academic work plan. The challenge is to have students reach their individual academic benchmarks.

During the program, they are awarded incentives that encourage continued hard work and dedication. The ultimate goal is for students to improve both academically and in every facet of manhood.

Stuttgart, Germany – Known for its historic train rides and its seismic contributions to scholarship across Europe, Theta Rho International Chapter, “Home of the European Ques,” marches proudly to its 50th anniversary.

These men with extraordinary vision led the first chartering of any Greek lettered Pan-Hellenic organization in Europe. The chapter was inactivated in 1972 and reactivated April 13, 1973 with nine members. The most famous of these Brothers was Major General Matthew Zimmerman who became the U.S. Army’s first African-American Chief of Chaplains.

With the collapse of the “Iron Curtain” in the early 1990s, the fall of the Berlin Wall brought about German reunification and a reduction of U.S. Armed Forces in Europe due to the reduced Soviet threat.

“Downsizing” of U.S. Forces in Europe coupled with Base Realignment and Closures (BRAC) significantly reduced the number of brothers serving in Europe and affected predominately active Omega areas of Nuremberg, Hanau, Wuerzburg, Berlin and Frankfurt.

Today, the “Hub” of Theta Rho now centers around two major cities, Kaiserslautern and Stuttgart. At the core of this significant celebration, service remains pivotal. The foundation of Theta Rho International Chapter has always remained firm on community and social action activities, engagements and initiatives that have touched so many communities around the world. These include donations to “Haiti Relief,” Coat Drive for the Salvation Army Homeless Shelter, Clothes Drive for the underprivileged, Toy Drive for children in a Women’s Refuge and partnership with Army Community Service launching their Domestic Violence Campaign.

Theta Rho International Chapter has expanded its community service initiatives and nationally mandated programs to Liberia and the United Kingdom, demonstrating its extraordinary vision and ingenuity to reach the broader community where its membership resides.

As Theta Rho turns 50, it is resolute in its will to strengthen these initiatives and fortify its members’ commitment to Omega Psi Phi through service.
Birmingham, UK – (United Kingdom) continues to add to the rich legacy of Omega Psi Phi as the Omegas living overseas make their mark on our beloved Fraternity. As Theta Rho International Chapter is strategically shaping the expansion of the Fraternity, the rolls have grown to include Brother W. Joshua Hallam. Brother Hallam, a business and economics major at Birmingham City University, was the first Omega man to cross into the Fraternity on United Kingdom soil this spring.

In his short fraternal life, Brother Hallam has earned the distinction of being named the 2011 13th District Scholar of the Year and was among his distinguished contemporaries at this year’s Centennial celebration where he was recognized. In receiving this honor, Brother Hallam understands the importance of the Fraternity promoting scholarship.

One such way in which this is done is through partnering with organizations such as General Electric (GE). These partnerships offer opportunities such as internships that provide recipients valuable experience in preparing them for the world of work. Seeking to take advantage of such opportunities, Brother Hallam believes in the second cardinal principle (Scholarship) and its potential to assist him in achieving his career aspirations.

Brother Hallam demonstrates impeccable character and scholarly prowess that should serve as a benchmark for all young men of Omega.

He possesses a high determination to succeed in all that he pursues. This is not only manifested on the soccer field where he continues to demonstrate his athletic brilliance, but in the classroom where he exudes resolve to overcome challenges.

His attitude to continue striving for excellence in his studies is borne out by his determination to seek appropriate experiences to complement his studies.

In attempting to describe Brother Hallam, one is compelled to look beyond his quiet demeanor and recognize his intrinsic leadership.

He has clearly mapped his career and is on a trajectory to accomplish these goals. His desire to want to pursue a path in the financial industry is commendable. However, as commendable this is deemed to be, it pales in comparison to his deeply seated desire to use these skills to improve his community and the Fraternity.

Indeed, Brother Hallam may be young fraternally, but it is evident that he has a deeply seated commitment to Omega Psi Phi and his community.
Revelation 7:15-17

And He said,
“These are they who have come out of the great tribulation;
they have washed their robes and made them white
in the blood of the Lamb.
Therefore, “they are before the throne of God and serve him day and night in his temple;
and he who sits on the throne will spread his tent over them.
Never again will they hunger; never again will they thirst.
The sun will not beat upon them, nor any scorching heat.
For the Lamb at the center of the throne will be their shepherd;
he will lead them to springs of living water.
And God will wipe away every tear from their eyes.”

After graduating magna cum laude in 3 ½ years, Brother Walker earned a master’s degree in Health Sciences and Physical Education from Columbia University in 1941 and a Ph.D. in Exercise Physiology and Biomechanics from New York University in 1957.

Brother Walker turned to coaching when he was told that he would have to wait 18 months before he could enter medical school. His coaching career began at Benedict College and he then moved to Bishop College and later Prairie View A&M College in Texas. In 1945, he settled at North Carolina College in Durham, N.C.

During his career, Brother Walker developed Olympic medalists and numerous national champions and all-Americans. The best known of those athletes, Lee Calhoun, won gold medals in the 110-meter hurdles at the 1956 Melbourne and 1960 Rome Games, and Larry Black, Julius Sang, and Robert Ouko who won gold medals in relay events at the 1972 Munich Games.

In 1974, Brother Walker became the Olympic men’s track and field coach. Two years later, he coached the American squad for the 1976 Olympics. That team featured – hurdler Edwin Moses and the decathlete Bruce Jenner. Each captured gold medals in six events at Montreal.

Brother Walker was president of the Athletics Congress (now USA Track & Field), the national governing body, from 1984 to 1988. He advised or coached Olympic teams from Ethiopia, Kenya, Israel, Jamaica, and Trinidad and Tobago; helped organize an American-Pan African meet; and took an American track team to China.

He was treasurer of the United States Olympic Committee (USOC) from 1988 to 1992 and a senior executive who helped lead preparations for the 1996 Atlanta Games. He was named as the president of the USOC in October 1992.

Brother Walker is survived by his son, LeRoy Jr.; his daughter, Carolyn Walker Hoppe; three grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.
